QUADRAX COMBICON - Loudspeaker cable with enhanced performance

Equipped with Supra CombiCon crimp connectors in Star Quad single-wire (2 > 2) full-range configuration. The tubular conductor design consists of 120 individually tin-plated strands braided around a PP plastic core. This construction helps maintain a more uniform current distribution across the conductor over a wide frequency range. At higher frequencies, signal transmission naturally migrates toward the outer conductor surface due to skin effect. By using tube-formed conductors, frequency-dependent conductivity variations are reduced, contributing to a flatter frequency response, fast transient behavior, and improved transparency.

When configured in a Star Quad geometry (single-wire/full-range), RF interference pickup and emitted magnetic fields are significantly reduced due to the symmetrical current flow in opposing conductor pairs, resulting in very low inductance. In addition, the tin plating minimizes micro-current transitions between strands that may otherwise introduce phase-related distortions.

CombiCon connectors are attached using a high-pressure crimping process. When properly executed, this creates an airtight, homogeneous, and electrically transparent connection comparable to fusion bonding.
