Sword 2x3.0 Fixed Spades

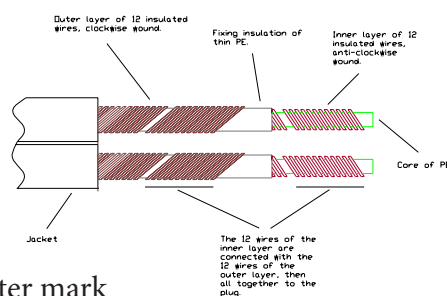

The foundation of Supra Sword's exceptional performance is its bifilar-wound litz conductors, comprising 24 individually insulated strands per pole. Twelve strands are wound in one direction and twelve in the opposite, effectively cancelling magnetic fields and resulting in extremely low inductance. The individually insulated litz strands also minimise dynamic skin effect, allowing Sword to behave as a non-inductive and phase-stable cable across the entire audible frequency range. The only thing left untouched is the music itself — every detail and dynamic nuance is preserved with complete transparency. Sword maintains the integrity of the original signal from your Hi-Fi system, providing a transparent transfer from amplifier to speaker. You hear the music — nothing more, nothing less.

The Sword version with fixed spade connectors is supplied with permanently mounted solid copper spades using a high-pressure crimp connection. These connectors are not interchangeable with optional Supra CombiCon terminations. The conductor and spade are crimped together under very high pressure, creating a perfect airtight connection for optimal conductivity and long-term reliability. The spades are insulated with Supra CombiCon sleeves.
